O LO: Can I focus on short stories that show the horror genre and analyse their features? Read the two short stories below. Then, complete the grid, thinking about the features that the short stories have that make them horror stories

The Hook

IT WAS THE SAME most evenings. Sam picked up Becky and drove his wreck to the parking area two miles outside town. There they could play the car radio full blast; they could hang out on their own.

It was already half-dark when they heard the local news: '... escaped from Locksley Prison ... convicted for murder ...'

Sam stopped drumming his fingers on the tacky steering-wheel.

'... a full-scale hunt is under way,' droned the voice on the dashboard. 'Police are advising members of the public not to approach him. He is extremely dangerous, and has a hook instead of a right arm.'

'A hook!' said Becky. 'That's horrible.'

'Horrible, horrible!' said Sam, grinning in the dark.

'What was that?' cried Becky, and she jammed herself against Sam.

'What?'

'That scratching!'

'Keep your shirt on,' said Sam. 'This piece of junk's always creaking and groaning.'

'Let's go,' said Becky. 'Now, Sam. Quick!'

'If you insist,' said Sam.

'Sorry,' said Becky, when Sam pulled up outside her house. 'I just got scared. You coming in?'

Then Sam jumped up and walked round the back of the car to Becky's side. And there, hanging from the handle of Becky's door, hanging and still swinging, was a large steel hook.

Who's Who?

JACK WAS FIRST to leave the Hallowe'en party. 'My mum,' he said. 'She wants me back by nine o'clock.'

As soon as he reached the bridge by the river, Jack dived into his bag and brought out the white sheet. Then he hoicked himself up on to the wall, and draped the sheet over him. Just a window for his eyes and nose and mouth: that's all.

This'll teach them, thought Jack. Serve them right for believing in ghosts.

It grew dark. And when clouds drowned the moon, it grew even darker. Jack could hear the gurgling-and-sucking of the river.

They won't be long now, he thought. They'll be coming soon. The party will be over by now.

When Jack turned round, he saw another white shape drifting over the bridge towards him. Drifting, and then she sat down on the wall right next to him.

'You've come to frit your friends,' she said, 'and I've come to frit. We'll both frit together.' Then she moved nearer to him.

Jack pressed on the heels of his hands and edged away from her.

'We'll both frit together,' she said, and she moved even nearer to him.

Again Jack edged away from her.

'Won't we, Jack?' she said, and she reached right out to give him a nudge.

'Don't!' cried Jack. And he raised both arms, lost his balance, and fell head first into the river.

O LO: Can I use what I have learnt so far about impressionism to create a final piece inspired by an image of the River Thames or sunset?

Resources needed for the lesson today: Impressionism lesson 4 PDF.

Read through the PDF document carefully. Then, pick an image from the final page and try to recreate it at home. If you have paints, feel free to use them. If not, use coloured or sketching pencils and think about your shading and techniques you could use to create the different elements of light and shadow. Get creative and take your time!
